

The play, Brighton Beach Memoirs was the best play so far in KIS. He not only consisted of humorous but also very touching in many ways. The play, was not just a typical family play but it was a play where the setting was during the Great Depression in the crowded city of New York. Eugene Jerome (Chris), a curious and young boy has to live with his family that has many problems in terms of health and money. His aunt, Blanche Morton moved to his family due the death of her husband. The play basically talks about how Eugene experiences the conflicts in his family and the strong bond of a family.

One thing that made the play so good was the characters. The characters in the play. The play in some ways was really humorous due to the good acting of Chris. Chris was a perfect match for the character because their characteristic is very similar. The over exaggeration of Chris accentuated the character more and brought the audience's attention. Eugene also very curious and he sometimes doesn't realize the situation. His gullible and over curious personality made the play comedic.

Not only the play, but I think the appearance and the props is what made the play shine. The appearance of a person can explain what the character is like and the personality. The dresses and clothes the characters wore just gave me the idea what the movie is going to be about. The appearance is what makes the movie catchy and the play did a good job of doing that.

The most important thing is that the story is what made the movie shine. The setting and the story of Eugene made the play so interesting and fun. The struggles every character have to face and the problems they have to go through gave me tears watching the play.

The play overall was a success and I would recommend to other people to watch it. Its a play that will give you both tears and laughter. This teaches the importance of families and how one must be together in order to reach happiness. I'm satisfied with the play and I give a thumbs up for it.
